Millennials Aren't Getting Tested For HIV, And That's A Problem

By Ana-Marija Dolaskie — March 8, 2018

A recent report from the CDC shows about half of millennials aren't getting tested for HIV — a virus that was a sure killer in the 90s, but thanks to advancements in science has become a manageable illness. Still, millennials aren't taken it seriously. Why?