Every Picture Tells A Story – Who Funds the WHO?

By Chuck Dinerstein, MD, MBA — July 22, 2020

The World Health Organization, WHO, has had a great deal of ink in the last few months, especially since it has become a "blame-worthy" target of the President. The Financial Times asks and answers the question, Who funds the WHO?

In an apparent tie, the chief funders are the UK, and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, followed by Germany and the US. But there are a few other surprises on the list, including three members of Big Pharma, the National Philanthropic Trust (based in the US) and the Rotary. Japan and the EU, through their executive arm, the European Commission round out the countries making significant donations. Member states cover less than half of the WHO's expenses.

From the Financial Times, WHO struggles to prove itself in the face of Covid-19 [2]
Links
[2] https://www.ft.com/content/c2809c99-594f-4649-968a-0560966c11e0