Dr. Bloom on busted beta-blockers

By ACSH Staff — November 12, 2012

Last month, in his blog on Medical Progress Today, ACSH’s Dr. Josh Bloom expressed his surprise over a provocative new study suggesting that beta-blockers less effective than previously thought or maybe even useless.

He’s expanded on those thoughts in a more comprehensive article [1] for New Scientist magazine, entitled Beta blockers are busted what happens next?