Recently you found out that the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, 2015-2020 [1] has removed the section on oral health, specifically the recommendations on flossing, because research on the health benefits has been inconclusive. But dentists say, not so fast; flossing is still an integral part of oral health.